BE AN ARTIST WITHOUT STARVING

As a member of an Army Band, you will have steady work. You will also be guaranteed educational opportunities, housing, income, and a sense of security for yourself and your family that is difficult to duplicate in the civilian world. Here are just a few of the benefits you can enjoy:

- Start at an advanced pay grade.
- Educational assistance to help you pay for college courses and the Army will assist you in repaying your college loans.
- The Army will supply you with professional instruments and musical supplies.
- Government paid travel and moving expenses.
- Medical and dental benefits for you and your family.
- Room and board or housing and food allowances.
- Full discount shopping and commissary privileges for you and your family.
- Outstanding retirement benefits.

If you have an undergraduate degree in applied music or music education and advanced instrumental or vocal conducting experience, you may qualify as a candidate to be an Army Band officer. As an Army Band officer you will enjoy some unique leadership opportunities, plus all the privileges of an officer in the United States Army.

Just as a note, Army Bands always have a need for French horn, oboe, bassoon, clarinet and piano players. If one of these instruments is your specialty, you may qualify for other enlistment incentives.
